On the verge of History and Legend, a novel filled with shadows and brightness, pursuing the quest of a secret which has yet to be discovered

Glastonbury, Easter 2009: Richard Avon, a disenchanted mime, sees a young goddess and her one-armed acolyte in a wheel chair, inflicting a severe correction to four vagabonds.

Richard's life takes a drastic direction from that day on. Without a word, without a hesitation, he takes the incongruous couple under his protection, and presents it to his blind father, whom upon a single contact with the pretty Nina, regains his eyesight. Fascinated by the strange young woman who seems to be coming from beyond times, without questioning, Richard follows her in her quest through time and space. He still ignores that he is the eighth Percival chosen by Nina.

September 11, 1967: Christian Franzen's mother still hasn't given birth to her second child. His father, being in the army, is present only on the weekends. Christian Franzen hasn't yet explored the trunk filled with books he carries along with him, and hasn't yet found the Etoire del Saint Graal (History of the Holy Grail) and Pertesvaus (Percival). Christian Franzen is seven years old and hasn't killed anyone yet.

Richard Avon will discover himself through an initiatory journey and an esoteric quest. Will he question the right things in order to, perhaps, reach the truth about the Holy Grail?
